LANGUAGE. Reading. -- Supplementary Second Readers from the School Library. Seaside and Wayside No. 1. Continue the use of phonics as previously outlined. Test the ability to pronounce readily words that pupils have never before seen in print. Teach the use of diacritical marks. Require pupils to memorize choice short selections of prose and poetry, and to recite these both singly and in concert. Question for the thought. Pay attention to expression and position. Natural expression springs directly from the impulse of thought. Have pupils give the substance of the reading lessons in their own language. Have pupils copy selections on paper and on slates, and read them in the class. To prevent drawing, permit the pupil to read the sentence silently before reading aloud. Correct all mistakes in such a way as not to impede the action...
