There are two kinds of flags Flags, Observa- used on rifle ranges: wind flags and tion Equipment danger flags. and Accessories. 164. The wind flags are made of different sizes, but the larger they are the better. A pennant 6 feet on the hoist and from 25 to 30 feet on the fly seems to give the greatest satisfaction. The point of a pennant will show light winds, and the size of the flag will give a better unit on which to base the force of the wind. 165. In the model rifle range (see frontispiece and chapter II, plate I, page 18-a) wind flags have been placed at every hundred yards at the dividing-line between the different sections of the range. This is a good rule to follow and will insure the range being properly flagged. One great trouble with numbers of fine ranges is that there are not sufficient wind flags to give all men an equal chance of judging the wind. Of course, in the interest of economy it may be necessary to cut down this number slightly. In this case they might be placed at every 200 yards instead of every hundred, but we do not recommend that the flags be placed on lines of fire too widely separated. It is not well to have the flags separated by more than 300 feet. 166. In case the range is located in a section of country where there are...
